Rates of PTSD in people with eating disorders

Up to 23% among people with anorexia nervosa, an obsessive desire to lose weight by refusing to eat.

Up to 66% among people with bulimia, when excess overeating is often followed by self-induced vomiting, purging, or fasting.

Up to 32% among people with binge-eating disorder, which includes overeating without purging or other compensatory behaviors.

All three of those eating disorders are considered psychiatric conditions.
